Chit Chat

Just got done watching 4 back to back episodes of, you guessed it -

The Partridge Family! (thank you Nick at Nite) My boyfriend is now certain of my insanity as he and he alone witnessed my pure joy during the past two hours.

You see that little TV show helped me through my gay adolescence. It put its arm around me and saved me from all the confusion I experienced during the early 70's. And like any good recreational drug, it gave me a break, once a week for a  $\frac{1}{2}$  hour from all the terror of having those queer feelings and more importantly, not knowing what to do with them.

See there was only one identified gay person in our town. A man, a hairdresser who would walk his poodle through the streets of Easton, PA checking his 'do in the store front windows, trying desperately to ignore the jeers and name calling that I could only imagine awaited me as well.

Suddenly it's 1993, almost 25 years since I first laid eyes on Susan and the rest of my Friday night family. The local town fag managed to survive, but his nephew I hear died of AIDS several years ago. Our generation had no idea what lay ahead as we jumped into that psychedelic bus each week and escaped into our Screen Gems world of teenybopper luv.

This is the last issue of Susan mini mag (GASP!). I appreciate your patience and interest as I worked my way once again through my adolescent traumas, this time in the 90's. I've put out a full year of SMM, which was my original intention. I wanted to go out while we were still on top, and judging from your letters, comments, submissions, etc. I'd say it's time. I still have over a thousand pics of Sue (unused), so who knows where she'll show up next. But now it's time to get on with life. So, enjoy this final tribute to the amalgamation of the 70's and 90's as I continue trying to make sense of this chaos. And check out the advertisement in this issue for our reincarnation (minus Laurie Partridge) coming to your news stands this Fall.

I wish you peace and enlightenment. Do with your life what you really want. There is no other way to live. Break free and fulfill your desire.

Always remember to keep on Deydreamin'.

I love you -

Philip

Peek's

Here's my summer beauty tip for SMM:

Y'all know that no matter who you are or what shade y'all's skin is that the hot summer sun can do y'all some kinda damage. Make sure that if y'all has to go outside to throw out y'all's vienner sausage cans in the security ditch that y'all has the proper cover-up on! It's so simple, on account a cause just like it protects the vienner itself, vienner juice is the best to use, an' not only to prevent sunburn, but to kindly soothe it as well! Before sun, spread some a the juice over all exposed areas an' let dry (durin' this stage it is not a good idea to be around pets or hungry neighbors). After sun, try a cool twist by refrigeratin' your vienners an' smearin' the jelled juice on them sun-drenched areas for relief! Not only will y'all feel better, but y'all get a snack at the same time! An', if y'all insist on layin' out in the sun, take a vienner an' cut it in half (longways) an' place over each a y'all's eyes for protection! Have a great summer, I love y'all!

I THINK I LOVE YOU

Karen and I are eating Cheetos, listening to the Partridge Family's
"I Think I Love You."

Karen loves David Cassidy.
I love Susan Dey, her smile and her clothes and
her straight and knotless hair.
I won't tell Karen
that I like Susan best,
or about my hair's daily tangle,
the mat in the back like a spider's nest
rewoven each morning,
pulling like a hickey
at the nape of my neck.

I'll tell Karen
about the dream last night
where David kissed me,
but not the part where Susan lay on top of me
and my body clenched, then sprang:
a room made of mercury,
a dump truck spilling dark wet sand.

I'm like Woolly Willy, whose whiskers rush forward or away
when you drag the magic wand across his chin:
Susan pulled a horse-shoe magnet,
silver and red, over me.
It shone in the air above my face.
It pulled like reigns her hair.

HOT TIME (Summer in the City)

June 8, 1993

At the pier on the Hudson, naked with just a rubber cock ring on, listening to Joni Mitchell's Night Ride Home. There are 8 men out here at the edge. One has a jockstrap on, the others naked as I. The 8th is in his Calvin Klein underwear. 2 are masturbating. 2 more (now 10 total) walk out the pier and pause to speak to each other, to point things out.

There is a building across West Side Highway. "Who you gonna get to do the dirty work, when all the slaves are free?" asks Joni Mitchell, rhythmically. The sign on the building reads Superior Ink Printing Co., the brick is brown, accentuated with natural/white above the windows and at the roof. A smokestack booms ridiculously out of the top of the building, looking out of date and ancient at the same time. I am trying to hard now (at prose) and... see even that (the word "prose") was trying too hard.

am getting too distracted wondering if the 2 "more attractive than the others" boys will do anything sexual.

June 11, 1993

At the pier again, same spot as on Tuesday. Different people. Had lunch with John Malatesta at the Good Diner. The day is 90° and blustery, the river is under and around me, choppy and refreshing. At least it would be if it were any other river. An unfortunate grey-green color, the water.

It is later in the day and I am listening to the Orb. My sexual energy is very powerful. I have attracted another sexually expressive man. And the storm clouds roll in as the music captures me. I am flying through the wind. He plays with his cock as I write this. The three young Japanese boys re-clothe and head to shore in anticipation of the storm. I'm thinking about leaving only because I don't want to burn too much. I can now concentrate. The man's cock grows. The other files his nails.

"That's it.

Loosen up that ol' butt hole."

Another Sexy Story (or at least some thoughts...)
by Bill Barr

I spent quite some time watching his cock, wondering if he noticed my distraction while he read the Sunday paper. Which sections had he brought with him? It was long and moist and curled purposely on the end to afford me a view of its beautiful circumcision. The tasty part that needed to be squeezed, to be licked. Not just by me. By both of us.

Without purpose we had positioned ourselves in opposite directions on the rickety wooden planks of the pier. I faced the boy, who had arrived after us. My boyfriend faced the setting sun, reminding me it didn't matter since it was well before 2 pm when we arrived. I was uncomfortable on my stomach, the Valium nulling the majority of the pain, leaving enough to remind me to be gentle with my pulled muscle. No need to make it more than a week away from the gym. After all, the California trip was a mere 2½ months away. I was desperately close to my pierced navel goal.

He arrived while I was resting. After chastising the near homeless queer for playing his radio without headphones, I sat up, typically bored from the lack of waves and sand and met his eyes. They bore into me, as I am sure they did to my luscious boyfriend at some point as well. We played with him, separately. Teasing him and wanting him. I imagined him coming home with us, peeling his cut-offs down to reveal the glistening flesh of his prick. His prick that would be the object of my oral obsession. My boyfriend thinking other thoughts. His fleshy, muscled body covering this boy from the rear. Penetrating him as I watched and teased him with my tongue, spitting words fit for a porn god.

We never spoke of our desire till nightfall. We watched the boy dress and leave without a word between us. I spoke that evening of my fantasy, my desire. I was exhilarated and already anticipating another such experience as this man I love with all my passion voiced a similar desire to play a game with another. We don't want a wedding. We don't need one. We write our own rules and speak often of our what our needs and desires hold. Our longevity comes from a common ground we continue to find in each other.

I think of my friends and others I meet each day as I write this. I hope they too will find someone someday to explore this magic. The wonder of unknown, scary emotion with another. It moves you forward. It heals your body. Talk about it to someone you love. Push yourself out of the darkness. Forward is the only way to move.

Purpose

Gay Games IV & Cultural Festival will have an enormous impact in breaking down negative and harmful stereotypes about lesbians and gay men; in promoting positive role models, especially to lesbian and gay youth; in affirming the spirit, enthusiasm and well-being of lesbians and gay men; in promoting fitness in our community and showing what HIV-positive individuals can do; in promoting international cooperation among lesbian and gay cultural and athletic groups; in outreach to numerous countries where lesbian and gay visibility is minimal or non-existent; and in establishing "mainstream" major corporate sponsorship for the lesbian and gay community.

We all know the stereotype "sissy boys" who are always told to be picked for sports teams classes, incapable of achieving athletics, and "mannish dykes," tougher than most guys, better sports than most people, void anything feminine. The dykes themselves are often told to be less attractive, though hard

Glorious drag queens, colorful floats, AIDS-support groups, marching bands and the full rainbow of our communities will mark the 25th anniversary of the Stonewall Rebellion. We commemorate the evenings of June 27 - 28, 1969 when a small band of drag queens came to the aid of their dyke sister when she refused to enter the police van outside The Stonewall Inn. They were soon joined by a crowd of over 300 young lesbians, gays and street people who fought back against the cops and set off three days of street protests known as the "Stonewall Riots". NYC June 93

When I first started masturbating I used to keep my balls between my legs - the stretched skin of my cock would then glow and the pleasure take me to a much awaited orgasm - these days I'm no longer hiding my balls - I shave them so they become as smooth as the mystic eggs of our forefathers - I feed them to my lovers and make sure they keep their eyes open to catch my asshole breathing or my hands stroking my cock as I am making love to myself, my horny self, my angry self, my higher self, my ecstatic self, my wounded self, - being in my power.

DisCovering DeAundra

by Mr. Rogers' Daughter

She entered my home with flashing trailer-park eyes. I knew her from watching her videos time and time again. One hand on the remote and the other, probing deeper and deeper as she sang to me on the T.V. But today she was here, in my living room, in the flesh. And in person, her voice dripped with an excited anticipation, anticipation of the weekend's main event. The March on Washington for Lesbian(!) and Gay Rights. You guessed the date. It was April 25, 1993 when she came into my life, my home on the day of the revolution.

She moved about her new surroundings and as she walked, I noticed her hips stretched and arched like a cat awakening from an afternoon nap in a sun drenched window. I was also anticipating the event, the March and what now could prove to be the highpoint of the weekend - finding us lazing the night away in each others arms.

"So, are ya'll ready for a good time," she asked this as though I were plural. "Yeah," I responded, pondering what this young thing named DeAundra Peek would do had she been aware of the one of me who wanted to take her then and there.

"I sure would like to see ya'll get a little bit excited!" As she spoke, she played awkwardly with the clasp on my necklace, returning it to its special position guarding my cleavage. "You have a lovely home here, much cozier than the double-wide, oh, I do lovvvvveeee cozy!" "Thank you," I replied, as composed as I could manage. "Would you like a beverage?" BEVERAGE??? I had never used that word before. "I have sweet tea or orange juice," I found myself saying. She declined the drink, and immediately began to inquire why I had placed the personal for a date to the March and how I felt when she responded to my ad and if I had ever dreamed that someone so famous would be accompanying me. Goodness,

GAY AMATEUR

I thought! This girl can ramble. I told her that all the other responses had been from women who wanted to be seen at the pre-rally and then disappear to a bedroom. I wondered if she would take the bait. After all, she told me she was 21, although I was sure she was years younger. She rolled her eyes and reminded me not to doubt her politicism.

Finally my pals were at the door and we were off. We rode the train with little conversation, each of us busy planning our own agendas. When we stepped out of the Metro station, we were overwhelmed by the sights and sounds of our queer revolution. My sweet Georgia Peach squeezed my hand as our eyes met for a brief moment before taking in all that the day had to offer. The drummers were drumming. Everyone in such bright colors and in the air, you could smell freedom and power and love. And Vienners. Everywhere we went, I could smell the signature scent that was DeAundra. We linked arms, she on my right and sashayed and chante-ed to the vendor area to pick up souvenirs. We giggled together like school girls at the leather man sporting his "I can't even whip straight" tee shirt. We went to find our marching order while Jesse Jackson pierced through the air, his cry for our freedom, his lesbian and gay sisters and brothers. I was overwhelmed with goosebumps, as DeAundra grabbed my arms and offered to rub it with some new Vienner anti-bump cream. I told her maybe later, and with that we were off. There were so many fun things to look at and discuss that time passed by very quickly. We fell into the rhythm of the day. We pointed our fingers and yelled ourselves hoarse, "Shame, Shame, Shame" at the right-wingers, all 20 of them to our million. I turned to DeAundra and signaled her a "thumbs-up". She grabbed me for a big ol' Southern hug. And I have to admit, I rarely meet another gal who can match my hugs. But that DeAundra, she's quite a big gal. And it was the hug that made us realize we would not be at the March much longer. The day was winding down as our passion for each other was mounting.

LOVE STORY

Without a word, we returned home on the train. Without even one sweet sentence out of her delicate, youthful mouth, I took her and she took me. We made love to "Can't Get Enough of Your Love", the Taylor Dayne remake, under the steps of my pool deck till the wee hours of the morning. And when we were done and she was sleeping soundly in my arms, it was then I decided to bronze the steps and have a plaque placed there in her honor, in our honor. I think something commemorating her coming out as a lesbian. A sistah. Doin' it for herself. You see, to the rest of the world, she'll always be a naive teenage superstar singing sensation. But I know the truth.

I took her that historical evening not so long ago. And she loved it.

Galactically Speaking...

by Alex Miller-Mignone

If you've been thinking about a career move, this may be the year for it. 1993 witnesses the waxing Saturn/Pluto square, a time of breaking down old forms so newer and better ones may thrive.

The collective is feeling the urge to change and transform (Pluto) things like career, government and financial structures and hierarchies of all kinds (all Saturn). This is a waxing square, with Saturn pulling ahead of Pluto, so the emphasis is on action; no think tanks this year - the watchword is "change," and change now!

The pattern sees three exact hits: March and October 1993 and January 1994, but the energy will be felt throughout the year. On a personal level, if you're ready for a change (or even if you're not), this pattern will support a major shift in job or career.

On a more inward, psychological level, we are being challenged to rewrite the limiting life scripts which structure our reality. Saturn is limitations, boundaries, rules, regulations and restrictions: it is "can't" and "should." "Don't do this;" "you ought to do that." The square to Pluto says, "why?" It opens us to the reality that most of our limitations are self imposed or grafted onto us in childhood from parents, teachers and others.

Saturn is also structure, form, organization and reality framing. Pluto is the great and powerful prefix: "RE-".

"REstructure."

"REform."

"REorganize."

"REFrame your reality."

It is ultimately, your reality, after all. Saturn is also responsibility, and the square is showing us that we have a responsibility to ourselves and others to reclaim our power to order our existence as we see fit. To make our own rules and accept responsibility for our lives. To regenerate (Pluto) ourselves by examining and discarding outmoded life scripts which foster limitation and disempowerment, replacing them with an internal structure which affirms life and choice, and embraces constant change.

Will we be up to the challenge of the cosmos? Only time will tell...

2. Why Do We Age?

BLOOD AND TEARS

Seems as if every time I come out of my fog, I keep coming back to this issue of HIV and aging. Have I missed something over the past couple of years or has no one considered making the connection before?

Why don't researchers ask people who've been exposed to the virus, what should be researched. Even random questionnaires would be helpful.

Everyone I know talks of some sort of aging process happening to them. Stiff joints, shortness of breath, early greying, premature hair loss, occasional memory loss, these are just the tip of the iceberg. Are we all just paranoid? Are we aging naturally? Or is the stress of this virus and the social ramifications aging us more rapidly?

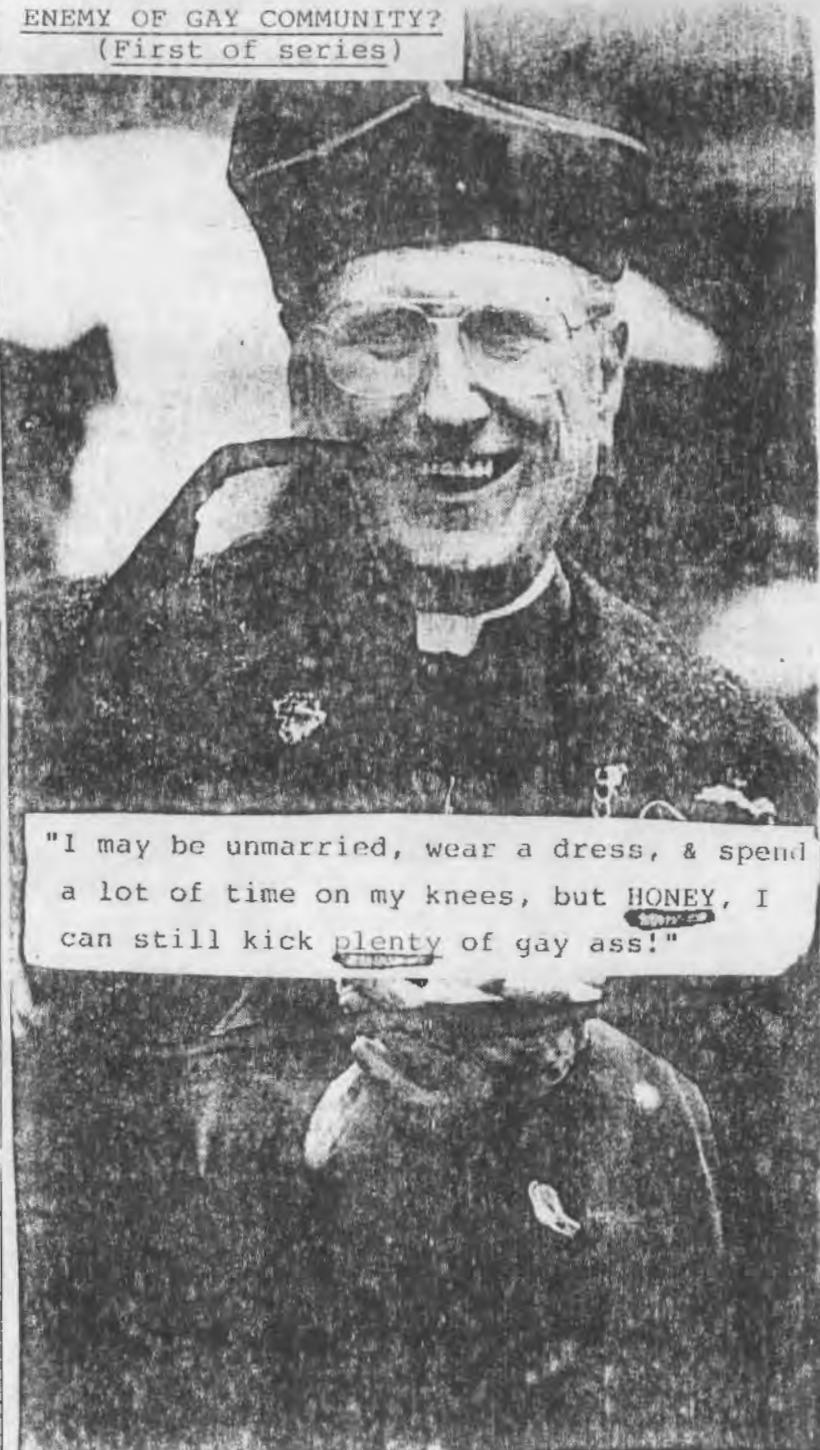

Are there correlations between older humans and people in various stages of the disease process?

Dating Secrets by your friend Hughie

HERE IS SOMETHING EVERYONE MUST KNOW:

Breaking up is hard to do.

And when two men are involved, it can be downright confusing.

Some men are very straight forward when breaking up. They'll invite their "soon to be ex" over, cook his favorite meal, then tell him he's seeing his best friend. Still, other men seem to have an aversion to ending a relationship. They prefer to take the passive mode, allowing the relationship to self destruct. They can't be bothered by dramatic farewells, the questioning of motives, endless discussions, closure therapy. They are bored and want out. "Click, dialtone, goodbye. Yes, on your mary way." To quote RuPaul.

I remember the first time a boy broke up with me. I was 17 and had been in a pseudo affair, for four years with the boy who lived across the street. It was Friday night and as usual, I went over to Larry's to suck some cock. That evening he told me that he didn't have time because his girlfriend Sarah would be there shortly. He never called me again. I guess Sarah gave good head too! It was all down hill from there. More recently, a doorman told me that my date was not coming down. Ever!

Everyone, with the possible exception of _____ (fill in your current fav porn star), has a story like the above. You may have dated a few weeks, or a few years. You may have shared a cab or an apartment. The details never matter. For some reason, he thinks the decision to break up is none of your business.

You sense a break-up is brewing and try to get your partner to sit down and fess up. No deal. The average queer male gets this "beam me up Scotty" look on his face as soon as you mention the word discussion. He treats you as if you're trying to serve him a subpoena. Then, when you finally get the nerve to ask him what the fuck is up, he pretends you're imagining the whole thing. It's all part of the game, and evidently the winner is the one who can quit the game without ever talking about. But don't think I'm jaded or anything. Read on. There's more.

Most fags think that even making a phone call is excessive when ending a relationship. "What's the point?", they want to know. The humane thing, they've decided, is not to call, but instead to disappear like the Lone Ranger. Meanwhile, I've been washing my hair with the water off - just in case he calls. And just in case he does call, I have hourly updates on my machine as to my whereabouts. "I'm at work now, but I'll be back by 6." "I'm at the gym." "I'm taking out the trash, sites? Good for anal

I'll be right back." Meanwhile, his machine has the same message as always, "I'm not home, see ya."

Stranded without an explanation my friends always seem to comment, "What did you do this time to chase him away?" "He seemed so nice, kind of kept to himself." But of course, I know the truth.

It's a rare and brave man that breaks up in person. Most likely, he has a 12-step program and does volunteer work. He'll say things you've heard before. "I'm unable to make a commitment." "I don't have time to be the boyfriend you deserve." Then he'll add, "I hope we can eventually be friends." "I'd really miss your company."

One more thing before I go. I've just gone through another break-up. Don't ever date a man under 25. Oh, and next issue, I'll be joined by my co-host for this column Dan. We'll be giving you the latest tips for successful dating in the gay 90's .

Your Friend Hughie is Susan mini mag's Philadelphia scene correspondent. His column is a regular feature new this issue.

"We must destroy the myths once and for all...shatter them. We must continue to speak out and, most importantly, every gay person must come out. As difficult as it is, you must tell your relatives, you must tell your friends (if indeed they are your friends), you must tell your neighbors, you must tell the people you work with, you must tell the people in the stores you shop in...Once they realize that we are indeed their children, that we are indeed everywhere-every myth, every lie, every innuendo will be destroyed once and for all. And once you do, you will feel much better!"

It's out there, I know.

The reality.

My reality.

The One I signed up for.

The one with the palm trees.

The one where I'm happy,
and more: content.

Where I'm successful, and liking it.

The one where he is there

Christian Coalition

The Sex Party Of The Century

But this whole issue, as Christie Adkisson already knew, was almost beside the point. Randy Miller, the ostensibly moderate candidate, was anti-abortion and was even opposed by many gay activists. For once, the Christian conservatives felt, the battle was being fought on their terms; that groups like the Christian Coalition could finally force a halt to what they see as a militant homosexual agenda and the decline of traditional morality.

"People are concerned," Christie Adkisson says. "They care. They recognize the importance of their involvement now."

Far right: Under the stewardship of Ralph Reed, 31, the ranks of the Christian Coalition have swelled to 350,000.

ing people to be effective — to be elected to school boards, to city councils, to state legislatures and to key positions in political parties." Later in the letter, he added, "By the end of this decade, if we work and give and organize and train, THE CHRISTIAN COALITION WILL BE THE MOST POWERFUL POLITICAL ORGANIZATION IN AMERICA."

Homosexuals have had a methodical plan, says a Christian Coalition member. "That's why we've had to wake up."

How could he ever forget the man who popped his cherry?

Come out Ralph Reed and make peace with yourself. Stop hating your brothers and sisters as much as you hate yourself. You are a fag. A big fag. A big homo hating fag. Handle it and fill yourself with love.

BUTCH

Getting asked out on a date is the greatest thing that can happen to a girl—and also the scariest, especially if she's not exactly sure about how to act! Don't worry—Susan Dey's going to tell you some of her dating secrets and maybe they'll work for you!

And when you make love the next time, and you will make love again, allow the exchange to happen and allow the love energy to permeate your entire being. This is where your inspiration will come from. This is where you will be able to translate the spiritual into the physical. This is where understanding will become second nature. And this is where your teaching will begin. Do not fear the physical expression of love like so many in your time. That is part of the disease. That is the disease. Fear.

A guy passed by who yelled
You must die!

I heard a girl laugh
a beer bottle smash.
I heard a hand slap

NOW!

So, what is it about healing yourself that scares you?

People do it everyday.

You can do it.

You know you have all the tools you need.

You've already started the process.

You yourself have acknowledged it has begun.

So, why can't you see the light at the end of the tunnel?

Others see the changes in you, noticeable changes.

They comment and compliment and urge you on.

You are doing the work.

Each day you are doing the work.

So, which mirror do you have to look into to see what is really going on?

To see the changes and the beauty and the reality of your healing.

To see what the others have already seen and continue to see.

You have to find that mirror.

So, when are you going to allow yourself the truth?

Not the god-awful truth.

The purity and possibility of your own personal truth.

So, where will you begin?

Remember, this is the last hurdle.

Take a deep breath and smile, knowingly.
